I want to draw the court's attention to one key inaccuracy in Ms Finelli's Closing Argument Statement. She includes our joint Chase checking account in her calculation. I do not know if it was made sufficiently clear, but the parties continued to share the joint Chase checking account after the separation. This account was equally divided in June 2019. Ekaterina continued to have access to this account until the end of June and she made sure that it was divided equally. I am surprised Ms Finelli brings this up because this has never been a point of contention. Ekaterina's March 8 RFO mentions nothing about it. If the court has any doubts about this information, perhaps it can order Ekaterina to answer the following questions in writing:

- Did you have access to the joint Chase checking account in June 2019?
- Did you receive ½ of the balance of the joint Chase checking account in June 2019?

Since this account was divided separately, it needs to be excluded from the calculation. Otherwise, the funds Ekaterina received will be double-counted. When it is excluded, Ms Finelli's table on page 2 has a more realistic total of $290,838.55. Ekaterina's share of this total is $210,419.28. This is consistent with what she received from the investment accounts ($200,947.79, Exhibit T2) plus the deposit to her individual Chase checking account ($10,000, Exhibit Ek1). On top of that Ekaterina also received $5000 deposit equalization.

My Exhibits T1-T3 show the calculations only for investment accounts. Bank accounts were divided separately:

	Eugene's PartnersFCU	Ekaterina's Chase
Initial deposit	$20,000	$10,000
Deposit Equalization	$-5,000	$5,000
Total	$15,000	$15,000

Table 11: Bank Account Division

I did not think this needed explaining. And to reiterate: our joint Chase checking account was equally divided in June 2019. For that reason it is excluded from all of my calculations.

Ms Finelli's table on page 2 merges investment accounts and bank accounts into the same calculation. If she wants to do that, she needs to take a look at Subtotal of Exhibit T5. Much of her argument is based on an elementary mathematical mistake.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.
