Introduction

The sheer gall and cruelty of Ekaterina's motion is just stunning. It is not enough for Ekaterina that she alienated my daughter and usurped 100% of physical custody, profiting financially in the process. It is not enough for her that she ended up receiving 100% of community property GOOG stocks (50% via equalization + 50% in kind). It is not enough for her that she increased her share of community property from 53% to 77%. It is not enough that she put me over $100,000 in debt. Nothing is ever enough for her. Ekaterina never misses an opportunity to kick me when I'm down.

Nature of this litigation

Supreme Court brief S290105 (attached hereto as Exhibit 1) contains a short description of this case. Here is an even shorter TL;DR. On March 8 2021 Ekaterina filed a motion against me which kicked off this litigation. This motion was full of lies and Ekaterina lost on all issues but one: "omitted" GOOG stocks. Family Court ruled that GOOG stocks were "omitted" because the MSA referred specifically to Schwab-6350 sub-account and did not mention Schwab-GOOG.

However, my FL-142 form (attached to S290105 brief) listed the combined dollar value of Schwab-6350 and Schwab-GOOG as simply "Schwab" with the balance of $205,622.38. I calculated community property division based on this number. Family Court ignored all the calculations which showed that Ekaterina had already been made whole in 2019: she received other stocks equal in value to the "omitted" GOOG stocks.

I appealed this order. Court of Appeal ruled that "Eugene's exhibits to his declaration opposing Katia's motion for determination and division of the Google stocks support his contention that the full value of both Schwab accounts was included in the numbers from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property."

It remanded the case to Family Court with instructions "to determine whether and to what extent sections 2556 and 2550 support a finding that the interests of justice require an unequal division of the Google stock".

(H050115 Opinion, p21)

On remand Ekaterina waited until the last moment to reveal her new argument. She abandoned her claim that I "hid" GOOG stocks. Instead, she made a number of new arguments with the intent of showing that she was underpaid. I acknowledged that two of these arguments had some merit. However, these arguments amounted to nitpicking at the margins and could only result in a very minor change in the calculation. In any case, after recalculating the community property division, it turned out that Ekaterina was actually overpaid (i.e. the dollar value of other stocks she received in lieu of GOOG actually exceeded the dollar value of 18 GOOG stocks).

The rest of Ekaterina's arguments were baseless. Family Court rejected these arguments.

Nevertheless, Family Court arrived at the same decision as before: award 18 GOOG stocks to Ekaterina in kind. This was despite the massive change in Ekaterina's argument and despite the fact that the calculations showed that:

- (1) Ekaterina had already been made whole and received the dollar value of 18 GOOG stocks. In fact she was slightly overpaid.
- (2) Ekaterina had already received more than half of community property in 2019. This was regardless of any conceivable under/over-payment.

Family Court once again ignored all the calculations and refused to do its own math. I filed a request for Statement of Decision which asked the court the following questions:

1. What was the total dollar value of the community estate assets at the time the parties divided these assets?
2. What was the dollar value of the assets that were transferred to Ekaterina in 2019 when the parties initially divided the community assets?
3. What percentage of community assets by dollar value did Ekaterina receive in the initial property division?
4. Do the numbers in items 1 and 2 above include the dollar value of Google stocks?
5. How can an asset be "omitted" when the prevailing party had already received the dollar value of that asset?
6. If item 6l of Judgement said "Schwab" instead of "Schwab-6350", would assets still be "omitted"?
7. Why did Family Court refuse to address items 1-6 until explicitly ordered to do so by the Court of Appeal?
8. Why did this court refuse to hear the Motion for New Trial, in violation of the relevant statutes and case law? (see the following documents filed on 06/15/2022):
 - a. Declaration of Patrick T. Bell
 - b. Declaration of Sandra Hosler
 - c. Respondent's Supplemental Memorandum
9. Why did this court deem peremptory challenge "untimely" when remittitur was issued on 09/26/2023 and said peremptory challenge was filed on 11/02/2023?
10. Does not itemizing accounts constitute not disclosing? Example: a party has a checking and savings account with Chase bank; on FL-142 that party enters the combined value of both accounts as simply "Chase".
11. How can any asset be omitted when the "aggrieved" party had already received more than half of community property?
12. Which party received more than half of community property in 2019 when the assets were initially divided?

(R. Trial Brief; final version in Motion in Limine #2)

Family Court refused to issue Statement of Decision. I then filed an Objection pointing out that, at a minimum, the following questions must be answered:

- What was the dollar value of community assets owed to Ekaterina?
- What was the dollar value of community assets Ekaterina actually received?

(Objection, p2)

It is self-evident that without answering these questions it is impossible to conclude that Ekaterina was underpaid. The dollar value of community property is not a he-said, she-said issue. It is a number that can be calculated from the evidence presented.

But to no avail. The court refused to answer. Court of Appeal did not consider this a problem and affirmed the order as-is. To this day there is no official answer, but anyone with a basic understanding of math can do this calculation for themselves.

Ekaterina's initial share of community property was approximately 53% (Trial Brief, p14). This was largely because per MSA Ekaterina received $28,000 more than me in vehicle value. Family Court increased Ekaterina's share to 64% by awarding her 18 GOOG stocks in kind, in addition to their cash value (Trial Brief, p16). And then further increased it to 77% by also awarding her another $60,000 as "sanctions" while ignoring Ekaterina's misconduct. By demanding yet another $11,830.74 Ekaterina wants to increase her grand total to approximately 80% of the original value of community property (Exhibit T4, Set 1).

Ekaterina's arguments on remand

As mentioned previously, on remand Ekaterina abandoned her claim that I "hid" GOOG stocks and made a number of entirely new arguments with the intent of showing that she was underpaid. These arguments are presented below.

Increase in the value of stocks

Ekaterina asserted that stocks increased in value between our separation (April 8 2019) and asset division (June-July 2019). I calculated community property division based on the numbers I entered in my FL-142, which was filled out on April 25 2019. It was my understanding that the numbers entered in FL-142 are to be used for this calculation. (We initially settled the divorce via mediation. I did not have an attorney.)

In response to Ekaterina's argument, I recalculated community property division based on April/May/June numbers. These numbers are shown in Table 10.1, AOB 19. Asset values changed little during this brief period. Moreover, it turned out that Ekaterina was actually overpaid because I made a mistake in her favor.

This table is shown below. Exhibits come from the filing “Exhibits: Set 1”. If we look at 06/30/2019 numbers, Ekaterina was overpaid by $3475.35. This is the date closest to the “date” of division. Ekaterina received 34% of her assets at the end of June, another 59% on July 2, and the remaining assets on July 10 (Exhibit B4, Set 1).

Unrealized capital gains

Ekaterina asserted that the assets she received had unrealized capital gains which would be subject to taxes when sold. Thus, their after-tax value is less than the nominal value shown in the financial statements. It’s an ok argument, but it has a number of problems:

- Capital gains of “approximately $13,000” would result in taxes of approximately $2800 (15% Federal + 6% California, Table 7.1, AOB 21). That is less than 1% of the total value of the assets Ekaterina received.
- Ekaterina was overpaid by a larger amount (Table 10.1, AOB 19).
- The assets I retained for myself also had unrealized capital gains. If Ekaterina had received different assets, her tax burden would be different but it would not be zero.
- Taxes accrue not when an asset is acquired but rather when it is sold. Stock prices change every day and taxable gain changes accordingly. For that very reason the above tax calculation is an estimate. Any talk of future tax burden amounts to speculation.

etc. See AOB 21 for more details.

Taxes on stocks sold in 2018

In 2018 community sold long-held stocks (GOOG and AAPL) and bought new stocks in their place. These sales resulted in capital gains on which community paid taxes. Ekaterina claimed that this somehow disadvantaged her and that she was underpaid for that reason. My Closing Statement p19 explains why this argument is without merit. (Essentially, it makes no mathematical difference whether the parties divide pre-tax stocks and inherit the original cost basis OR sell the stocks first and divide post-tax proceeds.)

In fact, now that I revisit this argument, I can state that I unwittingly did Ekaterina a favor by selling the stocks in 2018. If she had inherited pre-tax stocks, her tax rate now would be much higher than what community paid, because of Ekaterina's massive income (see "Ekaterina's Financial Situation" section below.) These sales had the effect of resetting the cost basis at a much higher level, such that taxes accrued on the stocks newly purchased in 2018 were much smaller.

Family Court correctly rejected this argument.

Relitigation of my condo

Ekaterina attempted to relitigate the division of my rental property condo. Family Court already ruled in the 04/08/2022 order that my condo (which I owned before marriage) is my separate property. Ekaterina's share is zero because it did not appreciate in value between the time Ekaterina's name was added to the title and the time of divorce. (However, Family Court ignored my claim of duress and side-stepped the whole issue of how Ekaterina's name was added to the title of my condo in the first place. See my Closing Statement p5.)

Family Court ultimately rejected this argument but allowed Ekaterina to waste time by relitigating it in the first place. This issue was already decided in the original trial.

Stocks I earned after separation

Ekaterina noticed that between our separation and asset division, I earned 10 additional GOOG shares. She claimed that these shares are community property that should have been divided. Ms Finelli – a “Super Lawyer” – advanced this argument despite knowing full well that it is contrary to Fam.Code §771 and Family Court’s own ruling in 04/08/2025 order, which held that only the 36 shares that vested by April 1 2019 (i.e. before the separation) are community property.

In response to Ekaterina’s argument I noted that she may be entitled to a minor modification – because our date of separation is actually April 8 2019 and Ekaterina is technically entitled to $\frac{1}{2}$ of the pro-rated fraction of shares that vested between April 1 and April 8 2019 (Motion in Limine #2, p3). The dollar value of this fraction of shares was approximately \$700.

Family Court rejected Ekaterina’s argument, but still felt the need to mention that between our separation and asset division I earned 10 additional shares – despite the fact that these shares are my separate property, as Family Court itself previously ruled. Family Court also declined to make the modification mentioned above.

Division of our joint bank account

Ekaterina implied that our joint bank account (to which Ekaterina had access) was not divided equally. She made that argument for the first time in her Closing Statement. I looked up additional bank statements and attached them to my Objection. It turned out that this account was indeed divided unequally – in Ekaterina’s favor (AOB 20).

Family Court rejected this argument.

Ms Finelli’s Arguments for Sanctions

My argument that the Google stock was not an omitted asset was baseless

The question I asked the court is this:

How can an asset be “omitted” when the prevailing party had already received the dollar value of that asset?

Both Family Court and Court of Appeal refused to answer this question. So, as best I can discern, the answer appears to be “it just can”. I suppose the above question can be reformulated as follows:

If one party “omitted” an asset but gave the other party equalization payment equal to ½ of the value of said asset, where is the harm?

We are not talking about physical assets. We are not talking about some items with sentimental value. We are talking about publicly traded stocks. They are all fungible. Thus, Ekaterina ended up receiving 100% of community property GOOG stocks: 50% via equalization + 50% in kind. I noted in my Request for Publication that Ms Finelli – a “Super Lawyer” – did not cite a single case with the same fact pattern. If such a case had existed, this appeal would not have occurred.

Furthermore, Family Court made this key finding in support of its ruling that GOOG stocks were an omitted asset:

“Both parties exchanged their unsigned Preliminary Declarations of Disclosure on May 28, 2019, the same day they signed their Judgment. There were no attachments, statements or required backup documentation attached to their Schedule of Assets and Debts.” (04/08/2022 FOAH, p5)

This finding framed the issue as if I kept Ekaterina in the dark about our financial situation until the very day we signed the MSA. This finding was proven to be false on remand (AOB 24). Ekaterina received my FL-142 declaration via email on April 25 2019 and I gave her printouts of the statements on the very day of separation.

As a layman, I would expect that when new information is discovered which contradicts prior finding, that would necessarily cause the verdict to change. But that has not happened, neither in Family Court nor in Court of Appeal. I suppose my legal knowledge is lacking.

Ms Finelli forgot to mention my main argument

Alternative argument which I raised on appeal is: “Did Family Court abuse its discretion by refusing to apply offsets to the “omitted” asset that it awarded to Petitioner?”

I illustrated this question with the following example:

“There is a massive difference between receiving 0% of what was owed and receiving 99% of what was owed. Fam.Code §2556 is meant to cover the former case. If it even applies to the latter case, surely the “good cause” exception must also apply in favor of the party who made the equalization payment, even if this equalization payment resulted in a slight underpayment. The correct outcome would be to quantify the alleged underpayment and award only that much. For example, if the value of the “omitted” asset is $10,000 and the “aggrieved” party already received $4,900 via equalization, surely the fair outcome would be to award only the $100

underpayment to that party. If instead Family Court awards 50% of the “omitted” asset to the “aggrieved” party, it will result in that party being paid twice: via equalization and in kind. And that’s exactly what Family Court did here.”

In other words: let’s suppose Ekaterina managed to show a minor underpayment. (That is all her arguments on remand amounted to.) Do I get any credit for the equalization payment I made, even if a subsequent calculation shows a slight underpayment?

Court of Appeal rejected this argument and allowed Ekaterina to be paid twice: via equalization + in kind. This resulted in her receiving 100% of community property GOOG stocks. Also, since Ekaterina had already received more than half of community property in 2019, this had the effect of exacerbating unequal division in Ekaterina’s favor. That’s a first for any “omitted assets” case.

My testimony was not credible

Ms Finelli asserts that:

“Eugene’s credibility, or lack thereof, was also a factor in the Sixth District’s Opinion.”

In affirming, the Sixth District stated the evidence supported this court’s credibility finding “in which it rejected Eugene’s claim that he was unaware of the impact of the tax basis or its effect on the value of the assets he transferred.”

(RFO p5)

Indeed. I testified that I selected the assets that I transferred to Ekaterina because those assets were overwhelmingly safe. 81% of her assets by value were bonds, gold, and cash (Table 2, AOB 19). I kept all the risky stocks. As Ekaterina herself stated, she was an “amateur investor”. There is also a separate issue that the method of division Ekaterina invented on remand is logistically impossible – a point Ekaterina did not dispute (Closing Statement, p16).

But Family Court saw right through that and concluded that the only reason I divided the stocks the way I did was to stick Ekaterina with all the taxes, while I would have to pay... slightly less taxes. (Contrary to Ekaterina’s framing, my tax burden was not negative. This can be easily seen by looking at the financial statements which were admitted as evidence, e.g. Exhibit B4.)

But for the record, how much taxes are we talking about? Well, the total tax burden on the assets Ekaterina received was... a whopping $2800 at the time of separation (Table 7.1, AOB 21). It is obviously higher now (or whenever Ekaterina decided to sell these assets) because these assets continued to increase in value after they were transferred to her.

Is $2800 a large number? In 2019 Ekaterina received $215,947.79 in liquid assets, approximately $180,000 in retirement assets¹, and a $36,000 fully-paid vehicle. The $2800 in potential future taxes is less than 1% of Ekaterina's total.

Furthermore, if she had received different stocks, her tax burden would have been different but it would not be zero. In fact, under any division of community stocks Ekaterina would end up with a larger tax burden than me simply because she received approximately 75% of the stocks (recall that her share was 50% + $65,000).

Note further that while Family Court has the prerogative to evaluate the parties' motivation and credibility, it cannot invent its own math. The tax burden Ekaterina complained about is less than 1% of her share of community assets. That is undeniable. Mathematical calculations are not subject to questions of credibility. All the numbers come from financial statements which were admitted as exhibits at trial.

But yes, Family Court discovered my sinister plot to shift a couple hundred dollars worth of taxes to Ekaterina. Never mind that she was still overpaid (Table 10.1, AOB 19).

Court of Appeal did not address my argument

And here is where Ms Finelli gets ahead of herself. She asserts that:

"The appellate court also refuted Eugene's argument that this court's equal division of the Google stock exacerbated an unequal division of community assets"
(RFO p6)

As noted in the Supreme Court Petition for Review (Exhibit 1, attached hereto), Court of Appeal specifically did not address this argument. Instead, it responded to a different, weaker argument which Ms Finelli herself quoted:

"Eugene's argument is based on the faulty premise that the trial court's task was to divide the omitted Schwab account to ensure that each party received an equal division of overall community assets."

As noted in ARB 17, this is not my argument:

"In summary, Family Court need not equalize but it must not exacerbate unequal division. Doing so is a grave injustice and a direct violation of Fam.Code §2550. Ekaterina already had more than half of community property before she filed her March 8 RFO which contained "omitted assets" allegation. Family Court should have preserved the status quo instead of awarding even more assets to Ekaterina."

¹ I cannot give exact number because I don't have access to Ekaterina's 401k statements. Bet per the MSA $144,806 was transferred from my 401k account to hers so as to equalize the two accounts.

Furthermore, it is mathematically impossible “to divide the omitted Schwab account to ensure that each party received an equal division of overall community assets.” as Court of Appeal stated. Ekaterina already had more than half of community assets before she filed her March 8 RFO, thus awarding any portion of Schab-GOOG account to her would exacerbate unequal division in her favor – which is exactly what happened.

Court of Appeal said only that Family Court was not required to equalize. But that is obvious and that is not what I argued. So we are in a very strange situation. This case was technically “reviewed” by Court of Appeal but my key argument went unanswered. Instead, they answered a different – and much easier question.

Ekaterina, of course, tried to “disabuse” (RB 20) the court of the notion that she had already received more of the community assets than me before she filed her March 8 RFO. But she went about it by attempting to count my separate property as community property:

- She attempted to relitigate the division of my rental property condo. Family Court had already ruled in 04/08/2022 order that my condo (which I owned before marriage) is my separate property, notwithstanding Ekaterina’s attempt to steal it. Thus, the value of my condo cannot be included in the calculation of community property.
- She claimed that the 10 additional GOOG shares which I earned after separation are community property. Again, Family Court had already ruled on this issue in the 04/08/2022 order. The value of the 10 additional shares cannot be included in the calculation of community property.

Thus, the instant case is the first (and so far only) “omitted assets” case in history where the “aggrieved” party had already received more than half of community property in the initial division and then had her share further increased by Family Court. There is also no answer from the Court of Appeal as to whether this is legal, despite the fact that I raised this argument on appeal. They instead answered a different question which I did not ask.

I am not entitled to Statement of Decision

This is the most bizarre part. I am not an attorney, so I cannot properly respond to Ms Finelli’s legalistic argument. All I can say is that I do not understand how the remand trial is not a “trial of a question of fact”. As I noted in ARB 9 “At the 02/27/2024 trial there was extensive testimony by both sides. New evidence was admitted. Both parties submitted written trial briefs and closing statements. Trial court made factual findings and orders.” That seems to meet the definition of a “trial of a question of fact” – but again, maybe my legal knowledge is lacking.

There is, however, a more fundamental issue. My request for Statement of Decision asked the court to calculate how much Ekaterina was owed and how much she actually received. It is self-evident that without this calculation it is impossible to conclude that Ekaterina was underpaid. In fact, it is impossible to make any informed decision about the division of community property without first determining the value of said property. So whether this calculation appears in SoD or in FOAH is immaterial – the point is that it was necessary for an informed decision based on facts, not feelings.

Thus, the argument that I am not entitled to Statement of Decision amounts to the argument that I am not entitled to any explanation for how Family Court arrived at its apparent belief that I somehow received more community property than Ekaterina. This is particularly troubling because such a conclusion is mathematically impossible. No amount of gaslighting about “lack of credibility” will change this fact. Mathematical calculations are not subject to questions of credibility. No amount of persuasion will make $2+2=5$. It is for that reason I argued that Family Court’s refusal to issue Statement of Decision is not “harmless error” (ARB 9).

Ms Finelli asserts that “Eugene did not show, or even try to show, prejudice as a result of the denial of a SOD.” (RFP p7)

I guess I don’t understand what prejudice means. In the instant case, all the calculations show that not only did Ekaterina already receive the cash value of 18 GOOG stocks in 2019, but she was actually overpaid (Table 10.1, AOB 19). I asked Family Court to perform these calculations for itself so that we could have the official answer to this question. Family Court refused, pretended that no equalization payment was made at all, and awarded Ekaterina 18 GOOG stocks in kind. If this is not prejudice, I don’t know what is.

I offered settlement, Ekaterina refused

Ms Finelli asserts that I “refused to entertain any settlement offers”. This is blatantly false. The one and only settlement offer Ekaterina made was to return 100 out of 360 GOOG stocks², i.e. 28% of what I was owed. I responded as follows:

*“I will offer one concession: I will listen to an argument based on the merit. If your client can show, mathematically, why she should be entitled to retain 260 of my GOOG stocks, I will gladly accept. But she needs to demonstrate that I made a mistake in the calculation. I did acknowledge my mistake with regards to my PartnersFCU / her Chase division and paid her $5000. In the absence of such showing, your client is simply attempting to keep stolen property. Moreover your client knows that it is stolen property and refuses to return it. This is absolutely despicable.”*

(Exhibit M, Set 2).

Ekaterina did not offer any argument. And, instead of trying to calculate how much she was owed vs. how much she had already received, she did her best to obfuscate that issue. Family Court did the same: it refused to do any calculations, pretended that no equalization payment was made at all, and awarded Ekaterina my GOOG stocks for the second time. This amounts to legalized robbery.

Did I receive a fair trial?

Ms Finelli asserts that “Eugene’s peremptory challenge argument was baseless”. That misses the mark. My request for Statement of Decision contained, inter alia, the following question:

9. Why did this court deem peremptory challenge “untimely” when remittitur was issued on 09/26/2023 and said peremptory challenge was filed on 11/02/2023?

Peremptory challenge was filed well within the 60 day window and should have been granted. (Certainly the clock for this timeline cannot start until remittitur is actually issued and jurisdiction over this case actually returns to Family Court – that would be absurd for a number of reasons.) But, as Ms Finelli previously noted, I am not entitled to Statement of Decision.

Even if the judge was not required to grant peremptory challenge, it would have been appropriate to do so anyway, to prevent the appearance of bias. In USA v. Microsoft, 9th Circuit Court of Appeal ruled En Banc that the appearance of bias is just as damaging to the credibility of the justice system as actual bias. While it largely affirmed the trial court’s order, it nevertheless reassigned that case to a different judge on remand.

I recognized that the inexplicable denial of peremptory challenge, by itself, is not reviewable on appeal. However, this was only one item out of a long list of issues that call the fairness of the entire process into question:

- Family Court deprived me of representation by removing my attorney under the pretext of “conflict of interest” (back then I could still afford an attorney). Ekaterina moved to disqualify my attorney not when I hired him, but 8 months later, immediately after she filed (but did not serve) her March 8 RFO which started this multi-year litigation. Court of Appeal did not even mention this issue in its H050115 Opinion.
- Family Court made a false finding regarding an issue that neither party raised. Moreover, I have good reason to believe that the trial judge knew that this finding is false at the time she made it. Court of Appeal cited this finding in H050115 Opinion. In H052147, Court of Appeal was presented with incontrovertible evidence that this finding is false. It failed to even mention this issue in H052147 Opinion.
- In the remand trial Family Court allowed Ekaterina to relitigate issues she had already lost in the original March 8-9 2022 trial, despite my multiple objections. This severely limited my time to cross-examine Ekaterina (AOB 12-13).
- The clerk’s office refused to file H050115 Motion for New Trial in blatant violation of Santa Clara county local rules. Family Court then used this failure as a pretext to dismiss Motion for New Trial as “untimely”. Court of Appeal refused to review this issue.

- The clerk’s office refused to file my Motion to Show Cause on the grounds that “It is unclear what you are requesting” (AOB 8). I was requesting Family Court to order Ekaterina to present her argument on remand, so that I would have a chance to evaluate and respond to it. Ekaterina’s gameplan on remand was the same as it was throughout this litigation: ambush me with last-minute arguments.

Etc.

Taken together, this presents an unmistakable pattern of bias. Hence my argument on appeal focused not on the denial of peremptory challenge specifically, but on the denial of due process in general. Court of Appeal ultimately rejected this argument. But I can’t imagine any of the above to be normal. It is quite telling that Court of Appeal simply avoided even mentioning most of these issues. To put this another way, if this is the typical manner in which justice is administered in Family Court, then the justice system is rotten to the core.

Imagine yourself not as a judge but as a party to a case. If you were on the receiving end of this process, would you consider it fair?

The instant case presented issues of first impression

Ms Finelli asserts:

“Furthermore, after receiving the appellate Opinion, Eugene filed a petition for review to the California Supreme Court. This was time-consuming and incurred additional fees and costs. And he had no realistic chance of being granted review, as the issues were hardly novel.”

(RFO p10)

This is absolutely false. As already noted multiple times, the instant case presented two issues of first impression:

1. This is the first “omitted assets” case in history where the “aggrieved” party had already received the dollar value of the asset that was supposedly “omitted” and then was awarded the asset itself by Family Court.
2. This is also the first “omitted assets” case in history where the “aggrieved” party had already received more than half of community property and then had her share further increased by Family Court (from approximately 53% to 77%).

This is not my opinion. This can be calculated from the evidence presented. But, of course, Family Court refused to do any calculations and simply declared that $2+2=5$.

I noted in my Request for Publication that Ms Finelli – a “Super Lawyer” – did not cite a single case with the same fact pattern. If such precedent had existed, this appeal would not have occurred.

Ms Finelli is correct, however, that the instant case did not create any new law – but only because my Request for Publication was denied, thus the instant case does not become a binding precedent – no doubt because everyone understands how horribly unjust it is.

Nevertheless, neither Court of Appeal nor Supreme Court banned the practice that occurred in the instant case. Therefore, I predict an avalanche of copycat cases wherein the woman first accepts equalization payment for a community asset, then goes back to court to claim that said asset was “omitted”. There is also no limit to this process: it doesn’t matter if the woman already had more than half of community property before making the “omitted assets” allegation. This allows her to extract any and all assets retained by the opposing party.

Ekaterina was already paid

It is undisputed that in June-July 2019 Ekaterina received equalization payment for GOOG stocks. The amount of this payment was $22931.53, calculated as follows:

- The value of 18 GOOG stocks was $19456.18 (Exhibit D, Set 1)
- Ekaterina was overpaid by $3,475.35 (going by 06/30/2019 valuation).

(Table 10.1, AOB 19).

According to Family Court’s logic, GOOG stocks were “omitted” because the MSA refers specifically to Schwab-6350 and does not mention Schwab-GOOG. But that also means that Ekaterina was overpaid by $22931.53 via other assets. She is therefore the constructive trustee of these assets and I am entitled to reimbursement.

So if the court is going to grant Ekaterina’s request for attorney fees, then that amount must be offset against the above overpayment. Moreover, $22931.53 is only what these assets were worth in 2019; their value today is much higher. That means a payment of, at minimum, $10,400 from Ekaterina to me.

My financial situation

As I have informed Family Court countless times before, this court put me over $100,000 in debt. I have some liquid assets but also $80,000 loan (Exhibit 2, attached) and over $50,000 in credit card debt.

As Ekaterina is well aware, my salary is $180,000/year, not $200,000 as she claimed. I do have $20,000 bonus target but that is (1) speculative and (2) will not be paid until February 2026.

Ekaterina is also wrong that I did not report my rental income. I did. It's $-900. I charge $2500 rent but pay $1200 first mortgage, $875 second mortgage, $516 HOA, $300 property taxes, plus constant repairs, special assessments, and other miscellaneous expenses.

For instance, in June the water main (the pipe that feeds water into the property) broke and flooded 3 units. The entire complex was without water for almost a week. I was forced to give my tenants $500 discount. HOA then charged homeowners $1800 special assessment to repair the damage.

I am also paying $1934/month to Ekaterina as child support – an amount $240/month larger than the guideline calculation. I want to remind the court how the last hearing went. The court agreed with my argument that child support was incorrectly calculated (see 02/21/2025 CFC 4251 motion). But it nevertheless denied my motion on purely procedural grounds: “no change of circumstances”. The fact that the commissioner used wrong inputs in her calculation doesn't count.

This, of course, is not the first time Ekaterina is wrong on the facts but won on procedure. Far from it.

Finally, my car is very old and I do not know how much longer it will last. I am still driving the same 2008 Subaru WRX that I owned since before I met Ekaterina. This potentially adds another large expense in not too distant future.

Ekaterina's financial situation

Ekaterina's income at this point is almost certainly larger than mine. She reported $165,000 / year base salary plus at least $40,000/year of RSUs and other perks. (AAPL stock, which Ekaterina receives as compensation, is publicly traded, and essentially equivalent to cash.) There is every reason to expect that Ekaterina's bonus income is even higher now, simply because of growth in AAPL stock value and additional RSU grants.

On top of her salary, Ekaterina receives $1934/month in “child support” from me – $240 above guideline. Plus additional amount for extra-curricular expenses (this amount varies).

Finally, Ekaterina is married to a very wealthy individual. She reports his income as $60,000 per month. Most people don't make that much in a year. Ekaterina's combined household income is well within the top 1%. She lives in a $3,000,000 house, drives a luxury car, and takes multiple international vacations per year. She does not need the money. She filed this motion only to hurt me.

Statement of Decision

I am still waiting for Family Court to answer the following questions:

- What was the dollar value of community assets owed to Ekaterina?
- What was the dollar value of community assets she actually received in 2019?
- Which party received the larger share of community assets in 2019?
- How can an asset be "omitted" when the "aggrieved" party had already received the dollar value of that asset?

I'm sure Family Court will once again ignore my request, but that does not make it any less relevant.

Conclusion

If Family Court has any sense of decency, it will deny this motion. Of course by now I understand how Family Court works, so I will not be surprised if it chooses to put me even further into debt.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the State of California that the foregoing is true and correct.

2. Does the party who “omitted” the asset but made equalization payment for said asset get any credit for that payment?
3. Does Fam.Code §2550 permit awarding even more assets to the party who had already received more than half?
4. How can an order be affirmed when the key finding it was based on is proven to be false?
5. Do procedural irregularities at Family Court amount to denial of due process?

Why review should be granted

The instant case presents two issues of first impression:

1. This is the first “omitted assets” case in history where the “aggrieved” party had already received the dollar value of the asset that was supposedly “omitted” and then was also awarded the asset itself by Family Court. In fact, she was slightly overpaid (AOB 19).
2. This is also the first “omitted assets” case in history where the “aggrieved” party had already received more than half of community property in the initial division and then had her share further increased by Family Court (from approximately 53% to 77%, AOB 23).

Court of Appeal did not consider this outcome to be a miscarriage of justice or a misapplication of Fam.Code §2556. I submit that it self-evidently is.

Additionally, the trial court made a finding which was cited in H050115 Opinion but was then proven to be false on remand. However, Court of Appeal did not find this to be a sufficient reason for reversal – it did not discuss this issue at all in H052147 Opinion.

Community property assets are often divided in such a way that one party keeps a particular asset but gives the other party equalization payment equal to ½ of the value of said asset. This is what happened in the instant case. However, Family Court ruled that an asset so divided is, in fact, “omitted” and awarded both the asset itself and the equalization payment to the “aggrieved” party. Court of Appeal affirmed this ruling.

This sets a very dangerous precedent. It allows a party to accept equalization payment for a community asset, and then, years later, go back to court and demand the asset itself under the premise that said asset was “omitted”. There is also no limit to this process. Court of Appeal did not consider it a problem that said party already had more than half of community assets before making the “omitted assets” allegation. Said party enriched herself by exacerbating unequal division in her favor. If this is not miscarriage of justice, I don’t know what is.

Statement of the case

This is a very short summary. For more details, with references to the record, please see H050115 AOB and H052147 AOB.

Eugene (hereafter “Husband”) and Ekaterina (hereafter “Wife”) were married on October 29 2010 and separated on April 8 2019, for a total marriage of 8 years and 5 months. They have one minor child of their marriage, born in 2013. The parties retained a private mediator to assist them with dissolution. Marital Settlement Agreement (MSA) was signed by the parties on May 28 2019, less than two months after the separation. Community property division was completed by July 2019.

However, shortly after the parties had a major disagreement. Wife wanted to enroll their daughter in private school, as they had planned before the separation. Husband countered that the parties agreed to enroll her in public school, Country Lane Elementary. Husband assisted Wife in co-signing the lease for an apartment of her choice in the school district she chose for their daughter. Divorce changed financial situation of both parties and private school was no longer affordable.

However, Wife never moved into that apartment. Instead, immediately after MSA was signed, she moved in with her then-boyfriend (now new husband) whom she had been seeing unbeknownst to Husband. Wife did not inform Husband of her intent to cohabitate during MSA negotiation and this was not taken into account when calculating spousal support. Furthermore, while her then-boyfriend was very wealthy, he lived in a completely different part of town with significantly worse public schools.

Wife proceeded with private school enrollment and began sending Husband invoices for private school tuition. In January 2020 she retained an attorney and threatened to sue Husband over this issue. In February-March 2020 the parties negotiated a settlement, which was filed on April 21 2020. It obligated Husband to pay for private school tuition in exchange for bidirectional termination of spousal support.

However, by this time Wife had obtained a new job and her income nearly tripled. She did not inform Husband of this during the negotiation of April 21 2020 Stipulation. Based on Wife's new income, no spousal support was due at all – and that's before even considering her cohabitation with a very wealthy individual. Attached with the Stipulation was a dissomaster calculation which listed Wife's old income.

A few months later, Husband found out about Wife's new employment. When he realized the subterfuge, he filed a motion to set aside Stipulation based on fraud. Wife retaliated in a number of ways. She violated the custody agreement and ultimately deprived Husband of custody of their daughter. She launched baseless child support litigation which she overwhelmingly lost. And – as pertains to the instant case – on March 8 2021 she filed an RFO against Husband challenging various aspects of community property division.

The March 8 RFO accused Husband of hiding assets (specifically GOOG stocks), breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, duress, etc. It demanded well over $250,000 in compensation (about 4x as much as Husband had in liquid assets) plus attorney fees and sanctions. Wife did not even attempt to meet & confer with Husband prior to filing this motion. Rather, she filed it in secret, obtained a hearing date of July 21 2021 and did not serve Husband until the last possible day (only 15 court-days before the hearing).

In the meantime, she filed a motion to disqualify Husband's attorney (Joseph Camenzind) under the pretext of conflict of interest – the same attorney who had been representing Husband for the previous 8 months. Wife claimed to have consulted with another attorney (Travis Witfield) who shares office space with Mr Camenzind and, from time to time, employs Mr Camenzind as “of counsel” on cases that they specifically agree for him to work on. Mr Camenzind never met or consulted Wife. Mr Witfield filed a declaration stating that he has no memory of ever meeting Wife, has no records pertaining to her case, and never discussed her case with Mr Camenzind. Nevertheless, on April 12 2021 Husband's attorney, Mr Camenzind, was removed.

At the same April 12 2021 hearing, Wife's attorney inadvertently mentioned her RFO. This alerted Husband and allowed him to prepare a response, which took well over a month to write and gather all the evidence (emails, financial statements, etc.) – Wife's RFO made multiple complex allegations. As pertains to the issue at hand – namely the “omitted” GOOG stocks – Husband argued as follows:

- He acknowledged that his Schwab account actually consisted of two sub-account: Schwab Brokerage (a.k.a. Schwab-6350) and Schwab Equity Awards (a.k.a. Schwab-GOOG) where his GOOG stocks were vesting. Husband was employed at Google at that time and GOOG stocks were part of his compensation.
- He pointed out that his April 8 2019 “divorce settlement proposal” email listed the two Schwab sub-accounts as separate line items, with balances of $161,107.95 and $43,457.40, respectively (Exhibit A, 3CT 664). His April 25 2019 Schedule of Assets & Debts declaration (FL-142) listed “Schwab” as a single line item with a combined balance of $205,622.38 (Exhibit N, 5CT 1284). This is akin to having a checking & savings account with Chase bank and listing their combined balance as simply “Chase”.
- He calculated community property division based on the numbers he entered in his FL-142 declaration (i.e. the combined value of both accounts). He acknowledged that Wife did not receive any GOOG stocks, but she did receive other stocks of equal value. This was corroborated by financial statements which were attached to his declaration and admitted as exhibits at the trial.

The above documents are attached as exhibits hereto.

Trial on Husband’s set-aside RFO and Wife’s March 8 RFO took place on March 8-9 2022. Order was issued on April 8 2022. Family Court ruled as follows:

- It upheld the Stipulation, except for one issue: “With respect to child support only, Katia’s failure to disclose her increased and actual income is a grounds for relief which materially affected the April 21, 2020 Stipulation and Eugene would materially benefit from the granting of the relief.” (1CT 253).
- It ruled that Schwab-GOOG sub-account which held GOOG stocks is an omitted asset due to the fact that MSA refers specifically to Schwab-6350 and does not mention Schwab-GOOG: “The November 18, 2019 Judgment awards each party one-half of the Schwab 6350 account (brokerage account) and is silent as to the Schwab GOOG account” (1CT 255, emphasis in the original)
- Based on the above finding, it awarded Wife 18 GOOG stocks out of the 36 which were community property. (1CT 262)

- It denied all other claims in Wife's March 8 2021 RFO. Wife committed perjury as to her claims but that was not mentioned in the order.
- It awarded Wife $60,000 as attorney fees / sanctions. (1CT 263).

The order made no mention of the fact that Wife had, in fact, received equalization payment for GOOG stocks. It ignored all the calculations which showed that Wife had been made whole, i.e. that she received other stocks equal in value to the "omitted" GOOG stocks.

On 04/29/2022 Husband's attorney electronically filed a Motion for New Trial, narrowly focusing on this one aspect of the order (back then Husband could still afford an attorney). Inexplicably, the clerk's office rejected this filing and demanded that it be filed on paper instead. This demand directly contradicted Santa Clara county local rules which mandate electronic filings for parties represented by an attorney. Nevertheless, Husband's attorney complied with the demand and on 05/04/2022 refiled Motion for New Trial on paper, together with a cover sheet explaining that it was electronically filed on 04/29/2022 and thus should be stamped 04/29/2022. Clerk's office finally accepted this motion on 05/20/2022 and stamped it with the same date.

Family Court then issued a tentative ruling stating that it is going to deny this motion based on the premise that it was "untimely". Husband's attorney filed a memorandum proving that this motion was, in fact, timely as a matter of law (2CT 307-330). He cited ample legal precedent which essentially stated that any mistake or delay by the clerk's office cannot be held against the litigant who filed the papers timely (2CT 327). Family Court ignored all of this precedent. At the 06/21/2022 hearing it summarily dismissed Motion for New Trial as "untimely".

This left Husband no recourse but to file an appeal. His appeal challenged three aspects of the Order:

1. The denial of his motion to set aside Stipulation. As Family Court itself noted, Wife failed to disclose her new and actual income during negotiations of Stipulation.
2. The award of 18 GOOG stocks to Wife without any credit given to Husband for the equalization payment that he made.
3. Unfair imposition of $60,000 worth of sanctions against Husband while ignoring Wife's misconduct.

Upon receiving clerk's transcript, Husband realized that it was missing some of the most important documents, including:

- Husband's responsive declaration which debunked Wife's claims
- All exhibits presented at trial
- Documents pertaining to the Motion for New Trial

Etc.

He filed a Motion to Augment the Record as to these documents. It was ultimately granted as to the documents filed before 04/08/2022 order was issued but denied as to the documents filed after that. This specifically excluded all documents pertaining to the Motion for New Trial.

At this stage Husband also ran out of money and was forced to continue the fight without an attorney. He noted in multiple filings that Family Court nearly bankrupted him.

On 07/27/2023 Court of Appeal issued its Opinion (H050115 Opinion):

- It affirmed Family Court's refusal to set aside Stipulation.
- It affirmed the imposition of sanctions against Husband.
- It affirmed that GOOG stocks were "omitted" but ruled that "Eugene's exhibits to his declaration opposing Katia's motion for determination and division of the Google stocks support his contention that the full value of both Schwab accounts was included in the numbers from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property" (H050115 Opinion p21).
- It remanded the case back to Family Court with instructions to consider "whether and to what extent sections 2556 and 2550 support a finding that the interests of justice require an unequal division of the Google stock" (H050115 Opinion p21).
- It refused to review Motion for New Trial because documents pertaining to this motion were not part of the record. And, as noted previously, Court of Appeal denied augmentation of the record as to these very documents.

On 08/08/2023 Husband filed Petition for Rehearing. He pointed out that per the MSA community property was divided unequally in Wife's favor and then Family Court exacerbated unequal division. The remand order gave no guidance to Family Court, so it could implement the same division again. Husband also noted that a key finding that

Court of Appeal cited was actually false (more on this later). Finally he wondered why any discussion about the removal of his attorney was absent from Opinion. This was relevant because Family Court cited Husband's opposition to the removal of his attorney as one of the reasons to impose sanctions on him. On 08/10/2023 Court of Appeal summarily denied Petition for Rehearing.

Remittitur was issued on 09/26/2023. At the 10/23/2023 status conference, Husband was informed that the same judge who heard the original case will also hear the remand. On 11/02/2023 Husband filed peremptory challenge. On 11/09/2023 Family Court denied peremptory challenge as "untimely" – a very curious ruling since peremptory challenge was well within the 60 day window.

Husband also reached out to Wife to see if she would return his GOOG stocks now that Court of Appeal ruled that "the full value of both Schwab accounts was included in the number from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property". She refused. She also refused to articulate her argument as to why she should be entitled to keep the stocks. This prompted Husband to file a Motion to Show Cause asking the court to force Wife to present her argument. But the clerk's office refused to actually file it on the grounds that "It is unclear what you are requesting" (AOB 8). The clerk who rejected this motion appears to be the same clerk who previously rejected Husband's Motion for New Trial.

Wife waited until the last moment to reveal her new argument and finally did so in her Trial Brief. She engaged in dishonest arguing technique called moving the goalposts. She no longer argued that Husband "hid" GOOG stocks. Instead, her arguments came down to complaining that there may have been a minor mistake in the calculation which would have resulted in her being slightly underpaid (AOB 10). However, after evaluating this argument, Husband recalculated community property division and it turned out that Wife was actually overpaid (AOB 19).

The remand trial was held on 02/27/2024. Instead of narrowly focusing on the issue that was remanded, Family Court allowed Wife to relitigate issues she had already lost in March 8-9 2022 trial (AOB 12-13). Order was issued on 03/25/2024. Despite the massive change in Wife's argument, Family Court still awarded the same 18 "omitted" GOOG stocks to her.

Husband's Trial Brief contains a request for Statement of Decision. It asked Family Court the following questions:

1. What was the total dollar value of the community estate assets at the time the parties divided these assets?
2. What was the dollar value of the assets that were transferred to Ekaterina in 2019 when the parties initially divided the community assets?
3. What percentage of community assets by dollar value did Ekaterina receive in the initial property division?
4. Do the numbers in items 1 and 2 above include the dollar value of Google stocks?
5. How can an asset be "omitted" when the prevailing party had already received the dollar value of that asset?
6. If item 6I of Judgement said "Schwab" instead of "Schwab-6350", would assets still be "omitted"?
7. Why did Family Court refuse to address items 1-6 until explicitly ordered to do so by the Court of Appeal?
8. Why did this court refuse to hear the Motion for New Trial, in violation of the relevant statutes and case law? (see the following documents filed on 06/15/2022):
 - a. Declaration of Patrick T. Bell
 - b. Declaration of Sandra Hosler
 - c. Respondent's Supplemental Memorandum
9. Why did this court deem peremptory challenge "untimely" when remittitur was issued on 09/26/2023 and said peremptory challenge was filed on 11/02/2023?
10. Does not itemizing accounts constitute not disclosing? Example: a party has a checking and savings account with Chase bank; on FL-142 that party enters the combined value of both accounts as simply "Chase".
11. How can any asset be omitted when the "aggrieved" party had already received more than half of community property?
12. Which party received more than half of community property in 2019 when the assets were initially divided?

(5CT 1329)

Family Court refused to issue Statement of Decision. On 04/04/2024 Husband filed an Objection pointing out deficiencies in Family Court's order. He argued that, at a minimum, the following questions must be answered:

- What was the dollar value of community assets owed to Ekaterina?
- What was the dollar value of community assets Ekaterina actually received?

(5CT 1410)

It is self-evident that without answering these questions it is impossible to conclude that Wife was underpaid. Family Court ignored the Objection and also denied Husband's Motion for New Trial.

So Husband appealed again. His appeal raised the following issues:

1. Family Court erred by refusing to issue Statement of Decision. The questions raised therein pertain specifically to the valuation of community property which Family Court was tasked with dividing.
2. GOOG stocks cannot possibly be an omitted asset because Wife had already received their cash value. In fact, evidence showed that she was slightly overpaid.
3. Even if there was a minor underpayment, Family Court had the duty to quantify the alleged underpayment and award Wife only that much. Otherwise Wife gets paid twice: via equalization + in kind.
4. Regardless of any under- or over-payment, Wife received more than half of community property in the initial division. By awarding Wife GOOG stocks in kind, Family Court exacerbated unequal division in her favor in violation of Fam.Code §2550.
5. The procedural irregularities at Family Court amount to denial of due process.

Court of Appeal dismissed all of the above concerns and affirmed Family Court's order as-is. Husband filed a request for publication pointing out that the instant case presents two issues of first impression:

1. This is the first "omitted assets" case in history where the "aggrieved" party had already received the cash value of the asset that was supposedly omitted and then was awarded the asset itself by Family Court.
2. This is also the first "omitted assets" case in history where the "aggrieved" party had already received more than half of community property in the initial division, and then had her share further increased by Family Court.

Court of Appeal denied the request for publication. There was no Petition for Rehearing this time. And thus we come to the final step in the process: appeal to California Supreme Court.

Argument

Refusal to issue Statement of Decision is not “harmless error”

In affirming Family Court’s Order, Court of Appeal relies heavily on Family Court’s supposed evaluation of the credibility of both parties. For example:

“The trial court found that Eugene’s unilateral selection of those stocks he transferred to Katia (rather than transferring one-half of all stock holdings valued at the time of transfer), through which he allocated capital gains to her but not to himself, resulted in Katia receiving less than one-half of the community stock assets. The court further found Eugene’s testimony not credible regarding his lack of awareness about the impact of the tax basis when deciding which stocks to transfer to Katia.”

(Op.11).

Whether Party A or Party B received more of the community assets is not a question of credibility, it is a question of math. To answer this question, the court would have to calculate the dollar value of the assets each party received. We are not talking about assets whose value is subjectively determined. We are talking about publicly traded stocks. Their value is unambiguous and was corroborated by financial statements.

Family Court refused to do any calculations and found only that “there was not an equal division of their stock” (5CT 1406). While that is true, the unstated insinuation that Court of Appeal relied on is that I received the larger share. But such a conclusion is mathematically impossible. (Table 10.1, AOB 19). Numbers are numbers. $2+2$ will never be 5. No amount of persuasion will change that.

The only way to determine how much community assets each party received – and whether there was, in fact, an underpayment – is to calculate those assets. That is precisely what I asked for in my request for Statement of Decision. Family Court refused to do any calculations and Court of Appeal did not see any problem with that. The absurdity of this outcome cannot be overstated. This essentially means that Family Court can simply declare that $2+2=5$, and then Court of Appeal will affirm this decision because “Well, the trial court evaluated the credibility of both parties. That settles the argument.”

The same reasoning applies to the tax burden. This is not a he-said, she-said issue. This is a number that can be calculated from the evidence presented. And, in fact, I did calculate it (Table 8, AOB 21). The fixation on taxes, furthermore, amounts to grasping at straws:

- Ekaterina received $215,947.79 in liquid assets (AOB 19-20), a similar amount in retirement assets, plus a $36,000 fully-paid vehicle (AOB 22). The total tax burden on the assets she received was approximately $2800 at the time of division (AOB 21, ARB 8). That is less than 1% of her total.
- Ekaterina was overpaid by a larger amount (Table 10.1, AOB 19).
- The above tax number is an estimate. Taxes accrue not when an asset is acquired but rather when it is sold. Stock prices change every day and taxable gain changes accordingly. For that very reason, courts generally do not consider tax implications unless they are “immediate and specific”, and will not speculate about future tax liability that a party might incur at some later date when a taxable event actually occurs (Marriage of Fonstein (1976) 17 Cal.3d 739.).
- If Ekaterina had received different assets, her tax burden would have been different but it would not be zero (AOB 30). In particular, GOOG stocks themselves had unrealized capital gains which would also be subject to taxes when sold. Moreover, at the time of division, most GOOG stocks had not yet passed the 1 year threshold and thus would not be subject to the favorable long term capital gains tax rate but would instead be taxed as regular income.

(AOB 30-31)

Again, the above is not a question of credibility. It is a question of math. I asked Family Court to do the math but it refused. It appears that Court of Appeal took to heart Ms Finelli’s argument that “we don’t need math”. Indeed. We only need gut feeling, apparently.

What happened can be summarized as follows:

Husband: Please calculate the dollar value of the community assets owed to Wife and the dollar value she actually received. Without this calculation, it is impossible to conclude that Wife was underpaid.

Family Court: No. All I can do is state that “there was not an equal division of their stock”. I will not even say which party received the larger share.

Court of Appeal: Well, that settles it. Looks like Wife was underpaid. Oh, and no calculation was required. Gut feeling is enough.

What kind of Kafkaesque justice is that?

The court’s reasoning amounts to obfuscation

The court’s obfuscation of the dollar value of community property is bad enough. But it gets even worse with the mention of the 10 GOOG shares that I earned after the separation. Court of Appeal cited this in its opinion affirming Family Court’s order:

“The court found it was undisputed that Eugene did not factor into his calculations the additional 10 shares of Google stock that he received between the parties’ separation in April 2019 and the division of community assets in July 2019, but simply kept those shares.” (Op.11).

This issue was explicitly addressed in Family Court’s 04/08/2022 order. The court specifically noted the fact that at the time of division (July 2019) there were 46 GOOG shares in the Schwab-GOOG account but at the time of separation only 36 were vested and thus only 36 were community property. It awarded Ekaterina 18 GOOG shares on that basis:

“Based upon Petitioner’s Exhibit 9, it appears as though there were 36 shares on April 1, 2019. Accordingly, Katia should receive 18 shares. In the event either party disputes the number of shares, the Court will entertain RFO.” (1CT 262).

No RFO followed – because there is nothing to argue about. This ruling is consistent with Fam.Code §771 which states unequivocally that “The earnings and accumulations of a spouse... after the date of separation of the spouses, are the separate property of the spouse.” This ruling was not appealed by either party.

Nevertheless, Ekaterina decided to relitigate this issue on remand in an attempt to show that she was underpaid. In response, I did note that Ekaterina may be entitled to a minor modification – because our date of separation is actually April 8 2019 (5CT 1328-1329).

But this modification would be limited to $\frac{1}{2}$ of the pro-rated fraction of shares that vested between April 1 and April 8 2019 – or approximately \$700 (ARB 15).

In any case, Family Court declined to make this modification in its 03/25/2024 order, but still felt the need to mention that between our separation and asset division I earned 10 additional GOOG shares. Court of Appeal cited this in its Opinion affirming the order, despite the fact that it does not affect the calculation of community property in any way.

So what is the point of even mentioning this issue? To create plausible deniability while impugning my credibility?

Finally, if Family Court believed that Ekaterina was entitled to any portion of the 10 GOOG shares that I earned after the separation, then their dollar value should have been included in the numbers that I asked the court to calculate in my request for Statement of Decision. But Family Court refused to do any math and simply hand-waved that “there was not an equal division of their stock”. Indeed. And who got the larger share?

How can an asset be “omitted” when the prevailing party had already received the dollar value of that asset?

So far both Family Court and Court of Appeal refused to answer this question. But this is the core of the issue. Evidence shows that Ekaterina had already received the dollar value of 18 GOOG shares. Again, this is not my opinion. This can be calculated from the evidence presented – but Family Court refused to do any calculations and chose to be willfully blind.

Consider the following scenario:

Divorcing Husband and Wife have a community property car worth $20,000. Husband keeps the car but gives Wife $10,000. Years later, Wife claims that the car is an omitted asset.

“But wait”, says Husband, “did you not receive the $10,000 that I gave you?”

“I did”, says Wife, “but the car is still omitted. Now hand it over!”

To Husband’s astonishment, the court sides with Wife.

This is, essentially, what happened, except that the assets in question are publicly traded stocks. Their values are independently determined by the stock market and corroborated by financial statements which were admitted as exhibits at trial.

As the Court of Appeal noted, “The mere mention of an asset in the judgment is not controlling. [Citation.] ‘[T]he crucial question is whether the benefits were actually litigated and divided in the previous proceeding.’” (In re Marriage of Thorne & Raccina (2012) 203 Cal.App.4th 492, 501 (Thorne & Raccina).) If receiving the dollar value of an asset does not constitute receiving the benefits, then what does?

The decision Court of Appeal arrived at contradicts the above principle and sets a very dangerous precedent. When dividing community assets it is quite common for one party to keep an asset and give the other party equalization payment equal to ½ the value of said asset. This is especially common with physical assets (such as a car, as illustrated above) but not limited to that. If this decision stands, then Family Court has carte blanche to simply declare any asset so divided as “omitted” and then award both the asset itself and the equalization payment to the “aggrieved” party.

I argued that this is a miscarriage of justice and a complete misuse of Fam.Code §2556. Court of Appeal disagreed. Supreme Court should weigh in on this issue.

Does the party who “omitted” the asset but made equalization payment for said asset get any credit for that payment?

Court of Appeal’s ruling that “the full value of both Schwab accounts was included in the number from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property” cut the legs from under Ekaterina’s argument. So on remand, she switched her argument from “GOOG stocks were omitted entirely” to “there may have been a minor underpayment” (ARB 10). She was not even able to show underpayment and decided to rely on obfuscation instead (AOB 19, ARB 7). But let’s consider the situation in which she succeeded in showing that there was, in fact, a minor underpayment. And let’s keep in mind the fact that the total value of the assets Ekaterina received exceeded $400,000 (between liquid assets, retirement assets, and vehicle).

In that case, does the party who in good faith attempted to equalize the division get any credit for the equalization payment he made OR can Family Court simply award 50% of the “omitted” asset to the “aggrieved” party, without regard for how much she had already received? By way of example:

“There is a massive difference between receiving 0% of what was owed and receiving 99% of what was owed. Fam.Code §2556 is meant to cover the former case. If it even applies to the latter case, surely the “good cause” exception must also apply in favor of the party who made the equalization payment, even if this equalization payment resulted in a slight underpayment. For example, if the value of the “omitted” asset is $10,000 and the “aggrieved” party already received $4,900 via equalization, surely the fair outcome would be to award only the $100 underpayment to that party. If instead Family Court awards 50% of the “omitted” asset to the “aggrieved” party, it will result in that party being paid twice: via equalization and in kind.”

The latter is what happened in the instant case. Family Court essentially pretended that no equalization payment was made at all and awarded Ekaterina 50% of the “omitted” asset in kind. I argued that the above result is a miscarriage of justice. Court of Appeal disagreed. Supreme Court should weigh in on this issue. Otherwise, the consequences are truly dire:

Finally, even if everything Ekaterina says is true, her argument still fails. She effectively asserts that any underpayment whatsoever, no matter how minor, should still result in her receiving 50% of the “omitted” asset. So hypothetically, an underpayment of $1 would be sufficient to justify awarding her $54,000 worth of assets. If this is not an abuse of discretion, I don’t know what is.

(ARB 15)

Court of Appeal did not consider this outcome to be an abuse of discretion. I submit that it self-evidently is.

Ekaterina’s original argument was that Schwab-GOOG account was omitted entirely. She included Schwab-GOOG statement with her RFO but deliberately omitted Schwab-6350 statement. A single look at both of these statements together shows that the “Schwab” number in my FL-142 is simply the combined value of both accounts. She was forced to switch to the underpayment argument in the aftermath of the Court of Appeal’s ruling – and she failed even at that.

Does Fam.Code 2550 permit awarding even more assets to the party who had already received more than half?

Court of Appeal misstated my argument as follows:

(Op.12)

This is the argument Ms Finelli made in her RB and it was explicitly addressed in ARB:

That is not my argument. I am well aware that only Schwab-GOOG was to be divided. However, my argument is that awarding even more assets to the party who had already received more than half is a miscarriage of justice. In other words, Family Court did not have to equalize community property division, but it certainly should not have exacerbated unequal division in Ekaterina’s favor – which is exactly what it did. If, as I argued, Family Court had ordered the return of GOOG shares to me, that would still leave Ekaterina with more than half of community property.

(ARB 15)

As for why the initial community property division was unequal in Ekaterina’s favor, that is explained in AOB 23. MSA contemplates equal division of liquid & retirement assets, but very much unequal division of vehicles (1CT 29-30). In accordance with MSA Ekaterina received $28,000 more than me in vehicle value (Table 8, AOB 22). As a result of that, her initial share of community property as a whole was approximately 53%. Family Court increased her share to 64% by awarding her 18 GOOG stocks in kind. And increased it again to 77% by awarding her another $60,000 as sanctions.

Note further that at the time of division 18 GOOG stocks that Family Court awarded to Ekaterina were worth $19,474.74 (based on 06/30/2019 closing price, Exhibit D4, 3CT 727). Thus, even if these stocks were 100% omitted, that would still mean that Ekaterina received more community property than me. It is thus mathematically impossible “to divide the omitted Schwab account to ensure that each party received an equal division of overall community assets” as Court of Appeal stated. Ekaterina would always have more.

In reality, of course, Ekaterina received equalization payment for GOOG stocks. And this equalization payment actually exceeded the value of said stocks (Table 10.1, AOB 19).

Court of Appeal further justified its order by saying that “Division of the community estate by agreement negates the requirement that the community estate be divided equally” (Op.12). However, there was absolutely no agreement for Ekaterina to receive both GOOG stocks and equalization payment for those same stocks. She ended up receiving 100% of this community asset: 50% via equalization + 50% in kind. This too was addressed in ARB.

In summary, Family Court need not equalize but it must not exacerbate unequal division. Doing so is a grave injustice and a direct violation of Fam.Code §2550. Ekaterina already had more than half of community property before she filed her March 8 RFO which contained “omitted assets” allegation. Family Court should have preserved the status quo instead of awarding even more assets to Ekaterina.

(ARB 17)

Court of Appeal did not consider this a problem. That means that there is no limit to this process. A party who had already received more than half of community assets by value can use “omitted assets” as a pretext to extract any and all assets that were retained by the other party. Supreme Court should definitely weigh in on this issue. In a sane world, the fact that a party had already received more than half of community property should necessarily preclude any “omitted assets” claims.

How can an order be affirmed when the key finding it was based on is proven to be false?

As noted in AOB 24, Family Court made the following finding:

“Both parties exchanged their unsigned Preliminary Declarations of Disclosure on May 28, 2019, the same day they signed their Judgment. There were no attachments, statements or required backup documentation attached to their Schedule of Assets and Debts.” (1CT 243)

This “finding” was used to justify Family Court’s decision that GOOG stocks are an omitted asset. Court of Appeal cited this same “finding” in its Opinion affirming this decision (H050115 Opinion p.2). Clearly, this “finding” was a necessary element to support this decision.

This “finding” has been conclusively proven to be false. I sent this declaration via email on April 25 2019, more than a month before signing the MSA. The email in question is now part of the record (Exhibit H, 3CT 778). It was not part of the record in the original trial because neither party ever made this argument.

Furthermore, I have good reason to believe that the trial judge knew that this finding is false at the time she made it. As noted even in H050115 Petition for Rehearing, the judge asked me when the parties exchanged their declarations. I responded that it was at the end of April and tried to look up this email to give her the exact date. The judge yelled at me and told me to stop looking (AOB 24-25).

To my astonishment there was no court reporter at this trial. I had no idea that this is even legal. I never made the same mistake again and hired court reporters at my own expense for subsequent trials.

As for attachments/statements, I noted the following incongruity. Neither party’s financial disclosure declarations list account numbers (Exhibits N and O, 5CT 1282-1290). They refer only to things like “Chase joint”, “Chase mine”, “Etrade”, “Schwab”, etc. However, the Judgement does (1CT 27). Every single item lists 4-digit account numbers. Ekaterina did not come up with a clear explanation for how that happened (AOB 25). I summarized my recollection in my Closing Statement (5CT 1372).

So I have the following question for the Supreme Court: can a judge simply make up “facts” to support her order? And what happens if Court of Appeal cites these “facts” to affirm said order?

I expected this issue alone to be sufficient for a reversal. Strangely, any discussion about this issue is conspicuously absent from Court of Appeal’s Opinion.

Do procedural irregularities at Family Court amount to denial of due process?

In dismissing concerns about due process, Court of Appeal focuses only on the denial of Peremptory Challenge. It seems to acknowledge that it was improperly denied but insists that this is not reviewable on appeal. However, I listed a whole host of other problems which, taken as a whole, call into question the fairness of the entire process:

- Family Court deprived me of representation by removing my attorney under the pretext of “conflict of interest”. Ekaterina moved to disqualify my attorney not when I hired him, but 8 months later, immediately after she filed (but did not serve) her March 8 RFO which started this multi-year litigation. Court of Appeal did not even mention this issue in its H050115 Opinion.
- Family Court made a false finding regarding an issue that neither party raised. Moreover, the trial judge knew that this finding is false at the time she made it. Court of Appeal cited this finding in H050115 Opinion. In H052147, Court of Appeal was presented with incontrovertible evidence that this finding is false. It failed to even mention this issue in H052147 Opinion.
- In the remand trial Family Court allowed Ekaterina to relitigate issues she had already lost in the original March 8-9 2022 trial, despite my multiple objections. This severely limited my time to cross-examine Ekaterina (AOB 12-13).
- The clerk’s office refused to file H050115 Motion for New Trial in blatant violation of Santa Clara county local rules. Family Court then used this failure as a pretext to dismiss Motion for New Trial as “untimely”. Court of Appeal refused to review this issue.
- The clerk’s office refused to file my Motion to Show Cause which asked Family Court to order Ekaterina to present her argument (AOB 8). Ekaterina’s gameplan on remand was the same as it was throughout this litigation: ambush me with last-minute arguments.

etc. (AOB 37) Does this sound like a fair process? If you were on the receiving end of this process, would you consider it fair?

Court of Appeal dismissed any concerns about gender bias despite it being common knowledge that Family Court is biased against men. Plenty of cases besides mine demonstrate this point clearly. Court of Appeal had an opportunity to affirm one important principle: no matter the trial court’s personal animosity towards a party, that party still deserves a level playing field and a fair hearing. It utterly failed in this duty.

Consider, for example, the case of Ernesto Miranda. He was not a good man. He kidnapped and raped a woman. And yet, USA Supreme Court held that even a man like that deserves due process and a fair trial. It overturned his conviction on the basis of coercive interrogation. Today Miranda warning is a necessary element of every police interrogation. If even a man like that deserves due process, why don’t I?

Conclusion

To recap: Ekaterina files a baseless motion which she loses on all but one issue. She commits multiple counts of perjury in the process. Instead of being sanctioned for that, she gets rewarded. The judge ignores the law and makes up facts to support her order. The clerk's office refuses to file documents that were properly submitted. Court of Appeal does not even mention these things in its Opinion and affirms Family Court's order as-is. It also ignores my actual argument and responds to a different, weaker argument.

If the Supreme Court believes that this is "justice", then there is no hope of justice left in the State of California. I realize that this is not the only case in which the justice system utterly failed, but I do hope that Supreme Court will take notice. My AOB contains "Changes to Rules of Court" section in which I proposed certain changes to mitigate the abuses I experienced at Family Court. The most important change is, of course, the court reporter – I am still baffled that it is legal to conduct a trial without one.

It is up to the California Supreme Court to redress this injustice. Will it do the right thing?

Hi Katia,

I like your idea of going through mediation and avoiding the lawyers. Here are the terms that we already talked about and a few more that I added.

1. Custody. I agree that Sonia will live with you. I want to have 1.5 days/week with her. That will mean, in practice, 1 day / 2 half-days on the weekend + visits a few times during the week. $1.5 / 7 = 21.4\%$. I want to round it up to 25%, so you will have 75% custody.

2. I want to have advance notice and veto power over any international trips. Since you will have primary physical custody of Sonia, I want to have her passport in my possession. I will keep it in the safety deposit box. In particular, I am concerned about trips to Russia. I don't mind Sonia seeing her grandparents, but I want to have some assurance that you will come back. As a Ukrainian, there is no realistic way I can travel to Russia at this time.

3. Separate property:

3.1. Partners FCU savings account. Balance: $1,050.41. Partners is the credit union for Disney employees. I had it before I met you. I had to maintain > $1000 balance to keep it a free account.

3.2. Fidelity Investments Roth IRA: $92187.60. This is from Disney 401k conversion. I quit Disney before we got married and I always kept this account separate. You have no claim to it.

3.3. Disney pension. $823.90 / month assuming retirement date of September 1 2044. You have no claim to it but you are listed as a beneficiary in case I die.

3.4. My car, 2008 Subaru WRX. I bought it before we got married.

3.5. My condo. 18350 Hatteras St. #138. I bought it long before I met you and it is rightfully mine. Yes, you were added to the title last year, so you are technically entitled to half of any appreciation since then. But that should be minimal. Also, it is simply not fair for you to assert any claim to the condo. You had no right to demand that I add you to the title in the first place. The rental income went to our joint checking account, so that money is hopelessly commingled and I'm not going to even try disentangling it. But the title should be returned to me.

(See below about the mortgage).

4. Retirement accounts:

4.1. Vanguard IRA: $255,430.09. Old Google 401k conversion.

4.2. Vanguard 401k: $59,745.61. Reopened after I rejoined Google.

I am trying to consolidate these two accounts into a single account, but in either case, the total is $315k. I earned all of this money, but per the community property laws, you will take half (less whatever you have in your 401k).

4.3. e-trade roth IRA: $16954.09. You will take half of this one as well.

5. Cash and investments:

5.1. e-trade brokerage: $66273.20

5.2. Schwab brokerage: $161107.95

5.3. Schwab equity awards: $43457.40 (Google stock vests here).

5.4. Partners FCU checking account: on the advice of my lawyer, I transferred $20k into this account. He told me horror stories about how spouses drain joint accounts making the other spouse unable to pay the lawyer or any other bills. So I stashed away some emergency cash. But I'm not trying to hide it -- this is still part of community property.

Total: $271k. And yes, you will take half of this. (actually more, see below).

We also have ~67k in the Chase checking account, but ~33k in taxes due and ~20k credit card balance. I'll have to see what the exact amount is once all the payments go through. My paychecks continue to be deposited into this account.

6. Mortgage. Last year I expected a recession, so I sold a lot of stocks and bought mostly bonds and gold (that's why we have the tax bill). But I also dumped $130k into the mortgage. This had the effect of taking $130k away from common property, so you can claim half of that money. I will give you $65k out of my portion of cash & investments. So the $271k will be divided as follows:

you get $200k

I get $71k

+ we each get half of what remains in the joint checking account once this agreement becomes final.

7. Vehicles:

2016 Mercedes GLE 350: $36000

2012 Suzuki GSX-R 750: $7000

Trailer: $1000

So I technically own half of your new car and you own half of my bike & trailer. I propose that we just keep our own vehicles. You are getting a much better deal than me here. (Note that my car is separate property).

8. Life insurance. You want me to keep you as the beneficiary. No objection.

9. Health insurance. I was planning on keeping you & Sonia on my health insurance. If I can only keep Sonia, you'll have to get a separate insurance for yourself.

10. Child & spousal support: to be calculated according to the standard formula. My income at Moveworks is going to be $170k / year.

11. Personal property: to be divided in a way that makes sense. For example, I keep my computer, desk, snowboard, tools, etc. You keep your bags & jewelry.

So in total, you will get over $400k worth of property, cash, and investments + child & spousal support.

Let me know what you think.

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
SIXTH APPELLATE DISTRICT

In re the Marriage of EKATERINA and
EUGENE STRULYOV.

H052147
(Santa Clara County
Super. Ct. No. 19FL001660)

EKATERINA STRULYOV,

Respondent,

v.

EUGENE STRULYOV,

Appellant.

This dissolution of marriage action returns to us for the second time on appeal. Appellant Eugene Strulyov asserts that the trial court, after conducting a limited hearing on the division of an omitted stock asset, erred in ordering him to transfer half of the shares of the community's omitted Google stock to respondent Ekaterina (Katia) Strulyov. Eugene¹ also challenges the trial court's denial of his request for a statement of decision and his peremptory challenge against the trial judge. Katia disputes Eugene's contentions and asks this court to levy sanctions against him.

¹ Because the parties share a last name, for clarity we refer to them by first name.

For the reasons explained below, we affirm the trial court’s findings and order after hearing and deny the motion for sanctions.

I. FACTS AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

A. The Prior Appeal

The prior appeal in this case addressed three trial court rulings challenged by Eugene and affirmed two of the three, reversing and remanding on the limited issue of the division of the Google stock. (In re Marriage of Strulyov (July 27, 2023, H050115) [nonpub. opn.].)² Specifically, in Strulyov, we upheld the trial court’s determination under Family Code³ section 2556 that the Google stock was an omitted asset in the November 2019 judgment of dissolution (2019 judgment). Nevertheless, we concluded that the trial court had abused its discretion by failing to address Eugene’s argument that there was good cause to order the Google stock should not be divided equally, based on his assertion that Katia had received the equivalent value for her share of the Google stock in the division of assets under the 2019 judgment. We remanded “for the limited purpose of a determination by the trial court whether the interests of justice require an unequal division of the Google stock” under sections 2556 and 2550. We expressly refrained from dictating how the trial court should exercise its discretion with respect to the division of the Google stock and left to the trial court whether it should make its determination based on the existing record or consider additional evidence.

The remittitur transferring jurisdiction back to the trial court issued on September 26, 2023.

² On our own motion, we take judicial notice of the record on appeal filed in this court in H050115, as well as this court’s unpublished opinion in that matter. (Evid. Code, §§ 451, subd. (a), 452, subd. (d), 459, subd. (a).) As the parties are already familiar with the facts and procedural history set forth in the unpublished opinion in H050115, we do not repeat them here.

³ All further unspecified statutory references are to the Family Code.

B. Proceedings on Remand

In October 2023,⁴ the parties appeared before the trial court to set the hearing on the remanded issue of the Google stock division. The same bench officer whose findings and orders were the subject of the prior appeal presided at the hearing and scheduled a half-day evidentiary hearing for November 29.

1. Eugene's Peremptory Challenge

On November 3, Eugene filed a peremptory challenge to the trial judge pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure section 170.6. Eugene asserted that following his successful appeal, he believed he could not “have a fair and impartial trial or hearing before this Judge.” Katia opposed the peremptory challenge on the ground that the matter to be decided was not a “new trial” within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure section 170.6, subdivision (a)(2)⁵ and so there was no legal basis for a peremptory challenge. Eugene argued in his reply that the remand did set the matter for a new trial, given the nature of the evidence and findings required to evaluate whether there was good cause for an unequal division of assets and considering the appellate court in Strulyov expressly recognized that the trial court might elect to consider additional evidence in making that determination. The trial court denied the peremptory challenge as untimely.

2. Evidentiary Hearing on Division of Google Stock

The parties exchanged trial briefs and Eugene filed motions in limine prior to the evidentiary hearing.

In his trial brief, Eugene requested a statement of decision on specified issues including the “dollar value” of the community asset division, how an asset can be ⁴ Unless otherwise stated, further date references are to 2023.

⁵ This subdivision provides in pertinent part that a party may bring a motion for peremptory challenge “following reversal on appeal of a trial court’s decision, or following reversal on appeal of a trial court’s final judgment, if the trial judge in the prior proceeding is assigned to conduct a new trial on the matter. . . . The motion shall be made within 60 days after the party or the party’s attorney has been notified of the assignment.” (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.6, subd. (a)(2).)

“ ‘omitted’ ” when the party had already received the dollar value of that asset, and why the trial court ruled that the peremptory challenge was untimely despite the timing of the remittitur and filing of the peremptory challenge. Eugene argued that (1) Katia already received the full cash value of her share of the Google stock when the parties divided the community assets in 2019, and (2) Katia already received more than half of the community property, which the trial court’s April 2022 order and imposition of sanctions (addressed in the prior appeal) further exacerbated. To remedy these inequities, Eugene requested that the trial court reverse the order requiring equal division of the Google stock, reconsider its prior sanctions order of $60,000, and consider an award of attorney fees in his favor.

Katia filed an amended trial brief in which she identified an additional 10 shares of Google stock that Eugene had received between April and July 2019, and which he disclosed in his trial brief on remand as having vested after the date of separation. These additional 10 shares were not included in the earlier accounting of the 36 shares of stock that the trial court determined were an omitted asset and which were the subject of the remand in Strulyov, supra, H050115. Katia asserted that Eugene’s failure to divide the Google stock constituted a breach of fiduciary duty. Katia argued that Eugene failed to divide the accounts equally by transferring stocks based on their value in April 2019 (when he calculated the division) rather than July 2019 (the date of division), retaining for himself those stocks with a zero or positive cost basis (thereby avoiding taxes or offsetting other gains), and selecting stocks for her on which she would have to pay capital gains tax (thereby shifting the tax burden to her). She asserted that these breaches of fiduciary duty undermined his good cause argument for an unequal division of the Google stock.

The evidentiary hearing took place on February 27, 2024, and was reported by a court reporter. The trial court noted that the issue before the court was “very limited” and that the court would issue “a written order” rather than a statement of decision. The court heard testimony from both parties, each of whom was cross-examined, and considered their written closing statements. Katia disputed the equitability of the property division carried out by Eugene under the 2019 judgment based on his unilateral decisionmaking about which stocks to transfer, the timing of the security transfers, their cost bases and tax impacts on the respective parties, and Eugene's undisclosed receipt of 10 additional Google stock shares. Katia also argued for an award of attorney fees for what she characterized as Eugene's breach of fiduciary duty. Eugene asserted that his documentation in 2019 accurately reflected the division of the investment accounts, that the Court of Appeal had agreed that the " 'full [investment] value . . . was included in the numbers from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property' " (citing Strulyov, supra, H050115, italics omitted), and that her receipt of more than half of the community property in 2019 justified returning the shares of Google stock to him.

3. Findings and Order After Hearing

On March 25, 2024, the trial court issued a written findings and order after hearing (order). The court clarified that it would not address or rule upon any of the additional issues raised by the parties in their briefing or at trial. After summarizing the parties' positions, the court explained that it found persuasive Katia's argument concerning Eugene's unilateral selection of which stocks to transfer, and the tax consequences of those selections, "with respect to the valuation and division of the parties' stock, and in particular, the omitted Google stock." The court did not find credible Eugene's testimony that he was unaware of the impact of the tax basis or its effect on the "actual value" of the assets. It found that Eugene admitted that he had not factored the additional shares of Google stock received between April and June 2019 into the community property division. It further found that "factoring the post-tax value of an asset allows for a more accurate calculation of its value."

Based on its findings, the trial court concluded that “[t]he parties received different values of stock in what was to be an equal division of an asset.” Because “there was not an equal division of their stock,” the court found there was “good cause for an unequal division of assets.” With respect to the omitted asset, the court ordered Eugene to transfer “one-half of the community shares of Google stock (36 shares as of July 2019, including any subsequent stock splits) to [Katia].” The court did not explicitly address, and declined to divide, the additional 10 shares of Google stock Eugene had acquired after separation but before the division of assets. The court also declined to award Eugene any attorney fees.

This appeal followed.

II. DISCUSSION

Eugene raises three primary claims on appeal. He challenges the trial court’s decision not to order an unequal division of the omitted Google stock by arguing that the court’s findings do not justify its order, that it relied on inapplicable law, and that it abused its discretion in refusing to offset any amount that Katia already received as value for that asset. In addition, he asserts the trial court erred by refusing to issue a statement of decision. He also contends the trial court violated his right to due process by denying his peremptory challenge and failing to explain its decision in the requested statement of decision. Katia challenges Eugene’s claims on the merits and further argues the appeal was brought for an improper purpose, warranting the imposition of sanctions.

A. Division of the Google Stock

The remand in Strulyov directed the trial court to decide “whether the interests of justice require an unequal division of the Google stock” under sections 2556 and 2550. (Strulyov, supra, H050115.) The parties agree that this issue, grounded in the principles that govern the division of community property, is reviewed for an abuse of discretion. (See In re Marriage of Campi (2013) 212 Cal.App.4th 1565, 1572; In re Marriage of Schleich (2017) 8 Cal.App.5th 267, 276.) Eugene also asks this court to review de novo the trial court’s application of sections 2556 and 2550.

We begin our analysis mindful that an “order of a lower court is presumed to be correct on appeal, and all intendments and presumptions are indulged in favor of its correctness.” (In re Marriage of Arceneaux (1990) 51 Cal.3d 1130, 1133.) We review orders concerning the distribution of marital property upon the dissolution of a marriage for abuse of discretion. (In re Marriage of Greaux & Mermin (2014) 223 Cal.App.4th 1242, 1250 (Greaux & Mermin).) Where, as here, the trial court has broad discretion to decide whether good cause has been shown to require an unequal division of the omitted asset, “ ‘ ‘ ‘appellate courts must act with cautious judicial restraint in reviewing these orders.’ ” ’ [Citation.] An abuse of discretion occurs ‘ “when it can be said that no judge reasonably could have made the same order.” ’ ” (In re Marriage of Grimes & Mou (2020) 45 Cal.App.5th 406, 424 (Grimes & Mou).) More specifically, “ ‘[i]f the court’s decision is influenced by an erroneous understanding of applicable law or reflects an unawareness of the full scope of its discretion, the court has not properly exercised its discretion under the law.’ ” (Wade v. Superior Court (2019) 33 Cal.App.5th 694, 709.) Thus, an abuse of discretion occurs “ ‘if the trial court based its decision on impermissible factors [citation] or on an incorrect legal standard.’ ” (Ibid.) We further review the trial court’s factual findings for substantial evidence, deferring to the trial judge on issues of credibility. (Grimes & Mou, at p. 421; see Jennifer K. v. Shane K. (2020) 47 Cal.App.5th 558, 579.) To the extent that Eugene challenges the trial court’s application of sections 2556 and 2550, we review de novo the construction of a statute and its applicability to the facts. (In re Marriage of Thornton (2002) 95 Cal.App.4th 251, 253–254.)

Examining the statutory law and record on remand, we conclude the trial court neither erred in applying section 2556 nor abused its discretion in ordering Eugene to transfer one-half of the 36 shares of Google stock as of July 2019, including any subsequent stock splits, to Katia. This court’s remand in Strulyov expressly directed the trial court to consider the application of sections 2556 and 2550 to the division of the omitted asset. (Strulyov, supra, H050115.) Section 2550 reflects the broad statutory powers conferred to the family courts “to accomplish a just and equal division of marital property” (Greaux & Mermin, supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 1250, citing §§ 2550, 2553) and affords the court “ ‘broad discretion to determine the manner in which community property is awarded in order to accomplish an equal allocation.’ ” (Greaux & Mermin, at p. 1250.) Section 2556 provides the courts continuing jurisdiction to address community assets or community liabilities that were not “previously adjudicated by a judgment in the proceeding.” Under the statute, “the court shall equally divide the omitted or unadjudicated community estate asset or liability, unless the court finds upon good cause shown that the interests of justice require an unequal division of the asset or liability.” (§ 2556.)

Eugene contends that section 2556 is not applicable to the present case because the omitted asset—here, the Schwab account containing the 36 Google shares previously deemed to be community property—was not, in fact, omitted but was already included in the cash value divided at equalization. He argues that since Katia had already received cash value for the 18 Google shares, the grant of another 18 Google shares in kind effectively awarded her 100 percent of the asset (“50% via equalization + 50% in kind”).

This argument disregards this court’s prior opinion in which we upheld the determination that the 36 shares of Google stock were not adjudicated in the judgment and thus were an omitted asset.⁶ Eugene’s argument also misconstrues the sole issue to be determined on remand, which was whether the interests of justice required an unequal division of the omitted asset (§ 2556), not to relitigate whether the Google stock had been omitted. Eugene’s reliance on In re Marriage of Rossi (2001) 90 Cal.App.4th 34 to distinguish these facts from a case in which the omitted asset was “truly omitted” (boldface omitted) because one party concealed and retained the asset, while the aggrieved party received nothing at all, is inapt.

Having reviewed the transcript of the evidentiary hearing, we conclude that the trial court did not err in applying section 2556. The court correctly recognized that the question before it was limited to the division of the omitted Google stock. Specifically, this court’s remand directed the trial court to determine whether the interests of justice required an unequal division of that specific community asset. (§ 2556.) After conducting the evidentiary hearing and reviewing the parties’ written submissions, the court concluded that the interests of justice did not require an unequal division of the omitted Google stock. In explaining that decision, the court explicitly found “good cause for an unequal division of assets,” citing factors including Eugene’s unilateral exercise of control over which stocks to transfer and the financial consequences of those choices. We understand this finding to pertain to the community assets in general—not specifically to the Google stock. In other words, even assuming (as seems likely) the trial court accepted Eugene’s arguments about having divided the value of the Schwab investment account as of April 2019, it nevertheless decided the omitted asset in question, i.e., the 36 shares of Google stock, should remain equally divided even if that ultimately led overall to an unequal division of community assets.⁷

⁷ Admittedly, the language in the trial court’s order is somewhat ambiguous. The ruling that “[t]he parties received different values of stock in what was to be an equal division of an asset. Thus, there was not an equal division of their stock” and that there is “good cause for an unequal division of assets” could be interpreted to mean that even if the stock value overall was equally divided (as Eugene contends), an unequal division favoring Katia (based on the division of the 36 shares of Google stock) was justified based on Eugene’s attempt to capture the tax benefits for himself and the other factors

Eugene argues that the trial court abused its discretion by refusing to apply offsets to the award of in kind Google stock despite his showing that the full value of both Schwab accounts (including the account containing the Google shares) was included in the value calculated at equalization. He points to this court’s statement in the prior appeal noting that his exhibits filed in opposition of Katia’s motion for determination and division of the Google stock “support[ed] his contention that the full value of both Schwab accounts was included in the numbers from which Katia and Eugene determined the total value of the community property” and argues that since Katia admittedly received the equalization payment, the trial court “had the duty to quantify” any alleged underpayment “and award only that amount to [Katia].”

This is not what the statute requires. The family court’s broad discretion to award community property “to accomplish a just and equal division” (Greaux & Mermin, supra, 223 Cal.App.4th at p. 1250) extends to an omitted or unadjudicated community asset or liability after judgment, “unless the court finds upon good cause shown that the interests of justice require an unequal division of the asset or liability.” (§ 2556.) The statute does not delineate or constrain the trial court in considering factors relevant to the interests of justice in allocating the omitted asset, nor does it require the court to expressly identify the value of each previously divided asset in determining whether the interests of justice warrant unequal division of the omitted asset.

In this case, the trial court heard evidence and testimony from both sides regarding the division of assets under the 2019 judgment. Eugene sought to establish that Katia received more than half of the community property based on his calculations of stock values—whether applying April 2019 stock values (when Eugene calculated the equalization) or July 2019 stock values (when Eugene divided the accounts). Katia cited by the court. Regardless of which interpretation applies, we uphold the trial court’s order as a valid exercise of its discretion based on those findings, for which there is substantial evidence.

countered that by transferring those stocks to her with the lowest cost basis and saddling her with potentially significant higher taxes, and by calculating stock values as of April rather than July 2019, Eugene failed to divide the investment account equally. In considering these arguments, the trial court weighed the evidence and assessed each side's credibility.

The trial court found that Eugene's unilateral selection of those stocks he transferred to Katia (rather than transferring one-half of all stock holdings valued at the time of transfer), through which he allocated capital gains to her but not to himself, resulted in Katia receiving less than one-half of the community stock assets. The court further found Eugene's testimony not credible regarding his lack of awareness about the impact of the tax basis when deciding which stocks to transfer to Katia. The court found it was undisputed that Eugene did not factor into his calculations the additional 10 shares of Google stock that he received between the parties' separation in April 2019 and the division of community assets in July 2019, but simply kept those shares. The court thus concluded that "there was not an equal division" of the community property stock assets and rejected Eugene's request for unequal division of the omitted asset. It ordered Eugene to transfer "one-half of the community shares of Google stock (36 shares as of July 2019, including any subsequent stock splits)" to Katia. Furthermore, the court declined to address additional issues raised by the parties at the hearing on remand, including Katia's breach of fiduciary duty claim and her request for division of the 10 additional Google shares.

Examining the entire record, we perceive no abuse of discretion in the trial court's evaluation of the evidence or its good cause determination. Substantial evidence in the record, including the April 8, 2019 e-mail from Eugene to Katia cited in the trial court's order, demonstrated Eugene's sophisticated financial literacy and understanding of investment strategy and tax consequences. This evidence supports the court's credibility finding in which it rejected Eugene's claim that he was unaware of the impact of the tax basis or its effect on the value of the assets he transferred. The record also supports the trial court's determination that factoring the post-tax value of an asset provides a more accurate picture of value and that the parties "received different values of stock in what was to be an equal division of an asset." Based on its finding that Eugene failed to divide the investment account equally, the trial court did not act arbitrarily in ordering Eugene to transfer one-half of the 36 Google shares previously held to be an omitted asset. On this record, we decide it cannot be said " " "that no judge reasonably could have made the same order." ' ' ' (Grimes & Mou, supra, 45 Cal.App.5th at p. 424.)

Eugene contends that the trial court's order dividing equally the 36 shares of Google stock exacerbates what he maintains was an already unequal division of community assets. However, Eugene's argument is based on the faulty premise that the trial court's task was to divide the omitted Schwab account to ensure that each party received an equal division of overall community assets. This was not the posture of the case on remand, nor could it have been given the nature of the property division under the 2019 judgment, which was by agreement of the parties pursuant to a stipulated order.

Division of the community estate by agreement negates the requirement that the community estate be divided equally. (§ 2550 ["Except upon the written agreement of the parties, . . . the court shall, either in its judgment of dissolution of the marriage, . . . divide the community estate of the parties equally." (Italics added)]). Thus, the relative value of the property divided in the 2019 judgment (including vehicles, Eugene's condominium, and other assets raised in the parties' arguments and testimony on remand) and whether it reflected equal division or was skewed slightly in favor of one party, as Eugene contends, might have been a relevant factor for the court's consideration but was by no means determinative in the court's assessment of good cause under section 2556 to order the omitted asset be divided unequally.

In sum, the purpose of the hearing on remand was not to relitigate the fairness or relative values of the original division of property under the 2019 judgment. The remand required the trial court to decide whether the omitted asset—here, the 36 shares of Google stock—should be equally divided between the parties pursuant to section 2556, or whether the interests of justice required an unequal division under that provision. We conclude that substantial evidence in the record supports the trial court’s finding of good cause as to the overall division of assets, based on the factors it considered in relation to Eugene’s unilateral control over that division, its rejection of Eugene’s request for unequal division of the omitted Google stock, and its implicit rejection of Katia’s request for an award of additional stock shares and attorney fees. The court thus did not abuse its discretion in ordering Eugene to transfer one-half of the 36 Google shares in the account as of July 2019 to Katia.

B. Statement of Decision

Eugene contends the trial court was required to issue a statement of decision and the error requires reversal. We disagree.

Code of Civil Procedure section 632 provides that “upon the trial of a question of fact by the court,” the trial court “shall issue a statement of decision explaining the factual and legal basis for its decision as to each of the principal controverted issues at trial upon the request of any party appearing at the trial.” The rule of court governing procedures for issuance of a statement of decision similarly applies “[o]n the trial of a question of fact by the court.” (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 3.1590.)

It is settled law that Code of Civil Procedure section 632 generally “applies when there has been a trial followed by a judgment. [Citation.] It does not apply to an order on a motion. [Citation.] This is true even if the motion involves an evidentiary hearing and the order is appealable.” (In re Marriage of Askmo (2000) 85 Cal.App.4th 1032, 1040 (Marriage of Askmo); see also Maria P. v. Riles (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1281, 1294; accord City and County of San Francisco v. H.H. (2022) 76 Cal.App.5th 531, 544.) Although courts have created exceptions to the general rule for special proceedings (often for decisions involving child custody), application of the exception is based on “ ‘(1) the importance of the issues at stake in the proceeding, including the significance of the rights affected and the magnitude of the potential adverse effect on those rights; and (2) whether appellate review can be effectively accomplished even in the absence of express findings.” ’ ’ (Marriage of Askmo, at p. 1040; H.H., at p. 545.)

Katia argues that a statement of decision was not required here because the limited issue on remand was “not a ‘trial of a question of fact’ ” within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure section 632 but “more akin to a hearing on a motion.” Eugene does not directly address the applicability of Code of Civil Procedure section 632 and appears to assume that a statement of decision was required in light of his timely request to the trial court.⁸

We agree with Katia that the narrow scope of this court’s remand in Strulyov, supra, H050115, requiring only a decision on whether there exists good cause to divide the omitted Google stock asset unequally, falls outside the purview of a “trial of a question of fact” as specified in the statute. The evidentiary hearing that took place and the trial court’s factfinding role in weighing the credibility of the parties’ testimony concerning Eugene’s 2019 division of the investment account does not render it a trial of fact for purposes of requiring a statement of decision. (Marriage of Askmo, supra, 85 Cal.App.4th at p. 1040.) Nor has Eugene shown that the issue on remand, confined solely to the disputed division of the omitted Google shares, is of such importance and magnitude, or so infeasible to review on appeal in the absence of express findings, as to except it from the general rule on issuance of a statement of decision.

Eugene accuses the trial court of subjecting him to unequal treatment (because he is male) and violating his right to equal protection, based on the court issuing a statement of decision in response to Katia’s request in the earlier proceeding while refusing to issue a statement of decision in this proceeding. However, this differential treatment derives from the statutory distinction between a limited scope hearing on remand and a “trial of a question of fact” (Code Civ. Proc., § 632), such as occurred in this case in March 2022, giving rise to the appeal in Strulyov, supra, H050115. In that two-day bench trial, the parties litigated multiple issues, including, among others, the parties’ breach of fiduciary duty claims, the community or separate property status of certain real property, the division of the investment account, and Katia’s entitlement to attorney fees, costs, and sanctions. The trial court did not err in its application of Code of Civil Procedure section 632, and its decision on remand to issue an order rather than a statement of decision does not evince bias against Eugene.

Even assuming that a statement of decision was required, Eugene has not shown that the failure to issue a statement of decision meets the standard for reversal. Eugene relies on Miramar Hotel Corp. v. Frank B. Hall & Co. (1985) 163 Cal.App.3d 1126, 1127, 1130 for the proposition that a trial court’s failure to provide a statement of decision when timely requested is per se reversible error. However, our Supreme Court has since clarified that a trial court’s erroneous failure to issue a statement of decision is not reversible per se but is subject to harmless error analysis. (F.P. v. Monier (2017) 3 Cal.5th 1099, 1108 (Monier); see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13; Alafi v. Cohen (2024) 106 Cal. App. 5th 46, 61 (Alafi).)

As explained in Monier, the California Constitution “explicitly identifies ‘any error as to any matter of procedure’ ([Cal. Const., art. VI, § 13]) as error that warrants reversal only if a miscarriage of justice would otherwise result.” (Monier, supra, 3 Cal.5th at p. 1113.) The “ ‘express terms’ ” of the Constitution “ ‘weigh against automatic reversal’ [citation] for a court’s procedural error in failing to issue a statement of decision.” (Ibid.) Reversible error in this context thus “requires a demonstration of prejudice ‘arising from the reasonable probability the party “would have obtained a better outcome” in the absence of the error.’ ” (Alafi, supra, 106 Cal. App. 5th at p. 62.)

Eugene argues that this case “easily meets” the miscarriage of justice and reversible standard discussed in Monier. He maintains that the trial court could not meaningfully evaluate good cause for unequal division of the Google shares without addressing the specific issues, particularly the “dollar value of community property” (boldface omitted) divided in 2019, which he asked the court to address in a statement of decision. He disputes Katia’s assertion that there can be no prejudice because the court’s order after hearing adequately addressed the bases for the court’s ruling and thus sufficed as a statement of decision.

We are not persuaded by either argument. For the reasons discussed ante, the trial court was not obligated on remand to make factual findings on the precise value of the community property divided at equalization to exercise its discretion on remand to decide whether good cause justified unequal division of the omitted asset. Furthermore, the trial court’s order adequately set forth the basis for its decision, finding that Eugene’s prior allocation of stock to Katia did not result in an equal division of the assets in that account and that Eugene’s testimony explaining the allocation was not credible. The issues that Eugene contends the trial court failed to address in its order are not, in fact, necessary for determination and do not compromise this court’s ability to exercise appellate review. Thus, this is not a situation in which one or more material issues “left unaddressed by a court’s failure to issue” a statement of decision effectively inhibits adequate appellate review. (Monier, supra, 3 Cal.5th at p. 1116.) We conclude that any failure by the trial court to issue a statement of decision or expressly address the questions posed by Eugene in his trial brief is, at most, harmless error.

C. Peremptory Challenge

Eugene challenges the trial court’s denial of his Code of Civil Procedure section 170.6 peremptory challenge, and its refusal to explain the basis for its untimeliness ruling in a statement of decision, as a violation of his right to due process.

Code of Civil Procedure section 170.6 authorizes a motion to disqualify the assigned judge “following reversal on appeal of a trial court’s decision, . . . if the trial judge in the prior proceeding is assigned to conduct a new trial on the matter.” (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.6, subd. (a)(2).) A party must bring the disqualification motion “within 60 days” after being notified of the assignment following reversal on appeal. (Ibid.) The denial of a disqualification motion may be reviewed only by petition for writ of mandate filed and served within 10 days of written notice of the court’s decision on disqualification. (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.3, subd. (d).) Thus, “ ‘[a]n order denying a peremptory challenge is not an appealable order and may be reviewed only by way of a petition for writ of mandate.’ ” (People v. Superior Court (Tejeda) (2016) 1 Cal.App.5th 892, 900; see People v. Hull (1991) 1 Cal.4th 266, 275 (Hull) [“The Legislature, through [Code of Civil Procedure] section 170.3[, subdivision] (d), has specifically determined that a writ of mandate shall be the exclusive means of challenging a denial of a motion to disqualify a judge.”].) A trial court’s denial of a peremptory challenge under Code of Civil Procedure section 170.6 is reviewed de novo. (Sandoval v. Superior Court (2023) 95 Cal.App.5th 1274, 1282.)

In apparent recognition that he may not seek review of the denial of his peremptory challenge on appeal, Eugene frames his argument in terms of due process. He cites People v. Mayfield (1997) 14 Cal.4th 668, a death penalty case abrogated on other grounds in People v. Scott (2015) 61 Cal.4th 363, 390, footnote 2, and Marshall v. Jerrico, Inc. (1980) 446 U.S. 238, as support for his contention that he did not receive a “fair trial before ‘an impartial and disinterested tribunal.’ ” In Mayfield, the California Supreme Court recognized that although a petition for writ of mandate is the exclusive method of review of a judicial disqualification motion, “a defendant may assert on appeal a claim of denial of the due process right to an impartial judge.” (Mayfield, at p. 811.) After examining the entire record, the court declared it found nothing to support the defendant’s charge that the judge in that case had to be disqualified for bias and racial prejudice. (Id. at pp. 810–811.) Meanwhile, Marshall addresses the potential for bias in the enforcement of federal child labor standards and does not support Eugene’s contention that the denial of his peremptory challenge gives rise to a due process violation. (Cf. Marshall, at pp. 244–247.)

Eugene lists several examples of alleged prejudice by the trial judge, including the court’s “inexplicable denial” of the peremptory challenge, “allowing [Katia] to relitigate old issues that she had already lost” while refusing to rule on his reasserted claim of duress, and the “refusal to issue [a] statement of decision” or “make any determination as to the” dollar amounts. (Some capitalization omitted.) He also asserts bias in relation to several issues raised in the prior appeal.

Eugene offers no authority to support his otherwise conclusory contentions that these decisions, which he perceives as adverse, were, in fact, the result of prejudice. (See People v. Avila (2009) 46 Cal.4th 680, 696 (Avila) [“ ‘[A] trial court’s numerous rulings against a party—even when erroneous—do not establish a charge of judicial bias, especially when they are subject to review.’ ”].) Nor does our review of the record reveal support for Eugene’s characterization of the trial judge’s decisions. On the contrary, the record reflects that the judge attempted to limit both parties at the evidentiary hearing to evidence and examination that was relevant to the narrow issue on remand and did not allow one side to “relitigate old issues” while imposing lopsided limits on the other side.

Whether the trial court erred in calculating the timeliness of Eugene’s peremptory challenge based on the 60-day window available on remand (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.6, subd. (a)(2)) is not reviewable in this appeal. (Code Civ. Proc., § 170.3, subd. (d); Hull, supra, 1 Cal.4th at p. 275.) Moreover, with respect to his due process claim, Eugene has not shown that that any such error in denying the peremptory challenge was because the judge had prejudged the case or was not impartial. (See, e.g., People v. Lewis and Oliver (2006) 39 Cal.4th 970, 994 [rejecting capital defendant’s judicial bias claim on the merits]; Avila, supra, 46 Cal.4th at p. 696.)

We conclude that Eugene has failed to provide persuasive support for his claims of judicial prejudice, bias, and deprivation of his due process right to a fair trial.

D. Katia's Motion for Sanctions

Katia seeks sanctions in the form of attorney fees in the amount of $10,475.74 against Eugene because the appeal is “objectively devoid of merit on its face” and was brought “for an improper purpose.” In arguing the appeal is meritless, Katia points to the limited question presented for determination on remand, the discretion afforded the trial court to consider additional evidence and decide on the division of the omitted stock asset, and the court’s reasoned findings and order, including its rejection of her request for some portion of the additional 10 shares of Google stock and for attorney fees. She maintains that under the circumstances, there “is simply no legal basis on which a reasonable person could believe [the appeal] ha[s] any legal merit.” Katia further asserts that Eugene brought the appeal not to raise meritorious legal claims but as a vehicle for airing his grievances with the trial court, repeating the same arguments raised at the hearing and in the prior appeal and causing her to expend additional time and resources to defend against the appeal.

Eugene counters in his reply brief that the appeal is not frivolous but presents an issue of first impression as “the first ‘omitted assets’ case in history” where the “ ‘aggrieved party’ ” (1) “had already received cash value of the ‘omitted’ asset and then was awarded the asset itself by the Family Court” and (2) “had already received more than half of community property in the initial division and then had her share further increased by [the] Family Court.”

“Whether to impose appellate sanctions is a matter within our discretion. [Citation.] Under [Code of Civil Procedure] section 907 and California Rules of Court, rule 8.276(a)(1), we may award sanctions when an appeal is frivolous and taken solely to cause delay.” (Citizens for Amending Proposition L v. City of Pomona (2018) 28 Cal.App.5th 1159, 1194.) “[A]n appeal should be held to be frivolous only when it is prosecuted for an improper motive—to harass the respondent or delay the effect of an adverse judgment—or when it indisputably has no merit—when any reasonable attorney would agree that the appeal is totally and completely without merit.” (In re Marriage of Flaherty (1982) 31 Cal.3d 637, 650.) “The two standards are often used together, with one providing evidence of the other. Thus, the total lack of merit of an appeal is viewed as evidence that appellant must have intended it only for delay.” (Id. at p. 649.) Furthermore, to avoid chilling the assertion of a litigant’s rights on appeal, the sanctions power “should be used most sparingly to deter only the most egregious conduct.” (Id. at p. 651.)

Having reviewed the record and arguments of the parties, we conclude the threshold for imposing sanctions has not been reached in this case. It is true that the claims raised in the appeal are largely premised on Eugene’s misapprehension of the nature of the remand order and his erroneous insistence that the trial court was obligated to ensure an equal division of the overall community property when dividing the Google stock. Nevertheless, we disagree with Katia that Eugene’s arguments are entirely unreasonable. Nor do we agree from our review of the record that Eugene’s motives were clearly improper.

We therefore decline to exercise our discretion to impose sanctions and deny Katia’s motion.

III. DISPOSITION

The March 25, 2024 order after hearing is affirmed. Respondent is entitled to her reasonable costs on appeal. (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 8.278(a)(1), (2).)
